Course Outline Honors English 11 (3A/3B)

Date: March 2004

Subject Area: English

Proposed Grade Level(s): 11

Course Length: 1 Year

Grading: A-F

Number Of Credits: 5/Semestero

Prerequisites: At least a 'B' grade in Honors English 10 or an 'A' in English 10

BRIEF COURSE DESCRIPTION:

Honors English 11 is a combination of the third year required course for high school curriculum relating to the development of oral and written communication skills and a more advanced level of study designed to prepare students who intend to take Advanced Placement courses in later grades. Emphasis is placed on higher levels of student performance with more complex assignments and materials; students will read and analyze literature of greater levels of difficulty in terms of language use and thematic content, use more precise language, conduct research of a more in-depth nature, develop the speaking skills needed in discussions, and write essays of greater complexity. Through their study of literature, students will also develop knowledge of and an appreciation for American literary traditions. While enrolling in Honors English 11 does not guarantee admission to AP classes, the more rigorous training in analytical reading and writing will prepare students for a more advanced level of curriculum.

Honors English courses follow the same standard and curriculum plan as regular English courses; the rate, depth, and complexity of material differ. Honors students will read more novels and literary works, write more essays, and analyze with greater sophistication.

GENERAL GOALS/PURPOSES:

Most of the standards and goals for language arts at the eleventh grade level focus on sophisticated extensions of the knowledge and skills previously targeted in the early grades. The goals highlight the relationships between the domains of reading, writing, written and oral language conventions, speaking and listening, and are listed under the State Content Standards in the Reading/Language Arts Framework for California Public Schools.

STUDENT READING COMPONENT:

Students will read American literature, magazines, newspapers, online information, speeches, editorials, essays, and poetry.

Word Analysis, Fluency and Systematic Vocabulary Development

Students will

- apply etymological and morphological knowledge to understand terms that may be taught in their political science, social science, science and mathematics courses.
- discern the meanings of analogies, analyzing specific comparisons, relationships and inferences.

Reading Comprehension

Students will

- analyze public documents—policy statements, speeches, debates—and the way authors use rhetorical devices and strategies.
- determine how the structural elements of a work create meaning by looking at word choice, organization and syntax.
- make warranted and reasonable assertions about the author’s arguments.
- analyze an author’s explicit and implicit philosophical assumptions and beliefs about a topic.
- critique the power, validity and truthfulness set forth in public documents to determine appeal to the audience.
- relate standards in reading to the standards in writing, as students read an example of a particular domain (e.g. persuasion) and employ those elements in their own writing (e.g. a persuasive essay).

Literary Response and Analysis

Students will

- compare the literary forms of the major literary periods in American history—colonial period forward.
- analyze the way in which the theme or meaning of a selection represents a view or comment on life.
- use textual evidence to support claims.
- analyze the ways in which irony, tone, style achieve rhetorical purposes.
- analyze the philosophical, political, religious, ethical, and social influences that have shaped the text.
- analyze clarity and consistency of political assumptions in a selection of literary works or essays.
- analyze philosophical arguments presented in literary works.

STUDENT WRITING COMPONENT:

Students will write narrative compositions; responses to literature; expository compositions including analytical essays and research reports that convey ideas logically; persuasive compositions.

Writing Strategies

Students will

- demonstrate understanding of the elements of discourse.
- use point of view, characterization, and stylistic choices for specific purposes.
- enhance meaning by utilizing rhetorical devices.
- employ a variety of research strategies and organize information in systematic ways.
- revise writing for voice, improved sentence variety and style, and enhanced subtlety of meaning and tone.

Writing Applications

Students will

- write reports of historical investigation, synthesizing information from a wide range of materials.
- write narratives, paying close attention to detail, and using effective descriptions of appearance and concrete images.
- write responses to literature that analyze imagery and language, universal themes and unique aspects of a text.

Written and Oral English Language Conventions

Students will

- write and speak with a command standard English conventions.
- demonstrate control of grammar, paragraph and sentence structure, and diction
- edit for standard conventions in spelling, capitalization, and punctuation.
- reflect appropriate manuscript style and format (e.g. Modern Language Association.)

STUDENT ORAL COMPONENT:

Students will speak both formally and informally to provide expository presentations, oral reports on historical investigations, responses to literature, multimedia presentations, and selections from speeches.

Listening and Speaking Strategies

Students will

- analyze media presentations of various types—advertisements, speeches, film, news—to recognize strategies used to persuade, inform, or entertain.
- apply literary elements to their own speeches: rhetorical questions, parallelism, and concrete images.
- apply elements required of oral presentations: gesture, movement, vocalization and rehearsal strategies.
- use standard English for clarity but recognize when informal or technical speech is appropriate.
- critique oral presentations and recognize common logical fallacies.

Speaking Applications

Students will

- deliver formal and/or informal presentations of the following types: narrative (autobiographical or fictional); expository (research); oral responses to literature; and argument or persuasion.

DISTRICT ESLR'S TO BE ADDRESSED:

Students will be:

- Self-Directed Learners who read and write independently, gaining confidence in their abilities to think on their own and synthesize information from a variety of sources, realizing that independent learning is a lifelong tool for success in the classroom and beyond.
- Effective Communicators who are able to relate polished formal and extemporaneous presentations with appropriate public speaking techniques and strategies.
- Collaborative Workers who are capable of working in both large and small groups in order to produce well-organized, thoughtful products such as speeches or analysis of literature. Group work will be a reflection of the effort contributed by each member of the group.
- Constructive Thinkers who reflect on their reading and writing to enhance the outcomes of their work. Students engage in higher level thinking activities such as analysis of characters, evaluation and peer editing of essays, and synthesis of a number of resources into a final written product.
- Quality Producers/Performers who take pride in all assignments and realize the value of creating an error-free product that is original in substance.
- Responsible Citizens who are prepared to contribute to our democracy in positive ways. Through their interpretation of literature, students gain an understanding of the responsibility, honor and integrity that is essential to become a functioning member of our society.
